CENTENNIAL DATE SET FOR SEPT. 11-16

Seymour Centennial Festival Organization Gets Down to Work of Arranging For Big Event.

COMMITTEES OUTLINE WORK

Centennial Features May Be Given Day All To Themselves—Attractions to be Carefully Selected.

Turn the pages of your calendar over until you come to September; glance down the page until you come to the second full week, commencing on the 11th. Then draw a big red ring around the entire week, from the 11th through the 16th. Mark it well, and make no plans for those six days that will take you away from Seymour.

For there will be no place that can vie with this fair city in the way of amusement, historical and educational interest, and a rousing, old fashioned good time, during those six days. If you have not figured it out for yourself by this time, perhaps we had better say at this point that this is the date selected by the Centennial committee last night for the Seymour Centennial Festival.

This week, coming as it does two weeks after the close of the chautauqua, between the farmers' harvest season and the time to commence on the fall work, and after the county fair season, appeared to the committee and to the business men who were interviewed to be the logical time for the event, and the committee vote was unanimous.

There was a good representation of each of the committees at the meeting last night, and, while none of them had much definite progress to report, the work of each was gone over in outline, and the interest and enthusiasm displayed promises well for the success of the undertaking.

R. A. Cox, of the Centennial subcommittee, spoke of the historical phase of the celebration, and mentioned some of the things which his committee expects to do. Mr. Cox will present the matter of the local event to the Jackson County Historical Association, and his committee will work in conjunction with that body and with the county centennial committee in arranging the historical features of the week. It has been suggested that one day of the week be given over entirely to the centennial committee, but this, of course, will be up to the program committee. Negotiations will be taken up at once looking towards securing the historical film depicting the principal events in the one hundred years of Indiana's history as a state, now being taken by the Selig company, under the direction of the Indiana Historical Commission.

Claud Carter, chairman of the program committee, said that his

H. S. PUPILS PLEASED WITH SHAKESPEARIAN READING

Miss Mentoria McDonald Gives Delightful Interpretation of "As You Like It."

Yesterday the large high school assembly room was crowded to its capacity to hear the delightful reading, "As You Like It", given by Miss Mentoria McDonald. To be able to delineate such characters as the vivacious Rosalind, the aged Adam, the amusing Touchstone or the dignified Duke, requires great adaptability of tone and gesture.

Miss McDonald's interpretation of the play was excellent and was especially appreciated by the high school classes who have recently been reading "As You Like It." Her clear, well modulated tones, her grace of manner and her natural charm captivated her hearers, and after the reading, which lasted one hour and a half, there was loud applause.

Miss McDonald, who is a pupil of Arthur J. Beriault of Indianapolis Metropolitan School, anticipates pursuing her dramatic work this fall at Northwestern University.

Her many Seymour friends feel confident that with her natural talent she will make a great success as a reader.

SHORT CIRCUIT IS SAID TO BE CAUSE

Estimated Damage to Residence of J. E. Graham, North Walnut Street, Exceeds $2,500.

HOUSE HAD BEEN REMODELED

Every Room in Two-Story Dwelling Damaged by Water, Smoke and Heat—Fire in China Closet.

According to estimates today the damage caused by fire and water at the home of John E. Graham, North Walnut street, late Wednesday afternoon, will exceed $2,500. The exact loss, however, will not be known until a more thorough examination of the house is made. The water damage was greater than the fire loss, it is stated, and it was difficult to accurately fix the amount of damage to the woodwork and hardwood floors as they are still water soaked. The furniture which was not removed was damaged by the smoke and water. The damage, it is stated, is fairly well protected by insurance.

Insurance Adjustor Fitzgerald of Indianapolis, was here today and made an inspection of the house. His first work was to ascertain the cause of the flames and after going over the place carefully reached the conclusion that the fire started from a short circuit of electric wires in the china closet. It was here that the fire was first seen and the flames may have started between the walls. An opinion was ventured by some that the fire might have originated from a match but so far as known no matches were kept in the closet.

The fire was discovered about 5 o'clock by children who saw the smoke pouring from the attic. The alarm was sent in from a neighboring house and by the time the hose wagon reached the place the entire house was filled with smoke. Evidently the fire had been burning for some time for as soon as an opening was made the smoke burst out as if the rooms were filled with coal gas. No one was at home at the time of the blaze. Mrs. Graham was attending the meeting of the Priscilla Club, and Mr. Graham, who is a member

MUSICAL PROGRAM GIVEN BEFORE THE HIGH SCHOOL

Students Hear Entertainment of Solos, Trios and Numbers by the Glee Club.

The high school musical organizations had charge of the chapel period this morning. These organizations are under the immediate direction of Miss Adelaide Gasaway, music director, and always assure the students a fine entertainment when they appear.

This morning's entertainment consisted of songs by a trio consisting of the Misses Lois Casey, Rachel Barbour and Hilda Howe. Miss Pearl Teckemeyer accompanied the trio at the piano.

Following the trio, Leonard Bartlett, a high school tenor soloist, sang "Grey Days" in such a pleasing manner that he was called back, and sang "Just a Wearyin' For You."

Following Mr. Bartlett's songs, the Glee Club gave a program of three numbers, all of which received the hearty applause of the student body.

MOOSE LODGE WILL HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICE SUNDAY

Sermon Will be Delivered by the Rev. H. R. Booch, Pastor of St. Paul Church.

The annual Memorial Service of the Moose Lodge in this city will be held Sunday night at the St. Paul Congregational church. The members of the order will meet at their hall before the hour of the service and march to the church in a body. The membership of the local lodge is large and it is expected that practically all the members will participate in this service. A special sermon, "A Vital Question," will be delivered by the pastor of the church, the Rev. H. R. Booch. Special music will be rendered for the occasion.

OLD STREET CAR MAKES LAST TRIP

Line From Passenger Depot to Public Square in Brownstown Will be Torn up at Once.

STREETS WILL BE IMPROVED

Construction Company and Citizens Purchase Franchise From Owner—Line Operated 25 Years.

After its last trip this afternoon between the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern passenger depot at Brownstown and the court house, the famous, old horse drawn street car is to be relegated to the scrap heap. The announcement that the service was to be discontinued after today brought a rush of traffic and the number of passengers registered was the largest for many months. Many Brownstown people rode on the car just for the sake of saying that "they made the trip on the day that the line quit business."

The horse-drawn car was "booted" out of the city by the jitney bus. The permanent improvement of the street over which the car was operated is the immediate cause of the line discontinuing business, however. The contract for paving about two miles of streets in Brownstown, connecting with the Vallonia concrete road, was awarded to the Kent Construction Company, of Shelbyville, and the contractors desired to begin work at once. When they talked of shipping their equipment earlier in the season the question of the tracks was presented and desiring to avoid any legal controversy decided to wait until that matter was settled.

The franchise for the street car line is held by Mrs. Frank Falk, of Indianapolis, formerly of Brownstown. At first she did not wish to surrender the franchise but arrangements were made with the construction company whereby she agreed to sell the franchise for approximately $750. The construction company agreed to pay all but $140 and this amount was raised by the residents of Brownstown. It is announced that the construction company will begin tearing up the tracks at once.

The old street car line was built about a quarter of a century ago by a company of Brownstown people. When it was first built and for several years afterwards it was a paying proposition and the stock was purchased by the late Frank Falk. During recent years, however, the line has not been a profitable investment. The automobile has been used to carry passengers to and from the court house and as the trip could be made more quickly in a "jitney" than in the street car the latter soon lost much of its patronage. It is understood that a company in Brownstown is expecting to purchase a large automobile bus in the near future to take the place of the old car line.

KENTUCKIANS PLEASED WITH LOCAL ORCHARDS

Inspect Land in This Vicinity With View of Setting Out Large Number of Trees.

Having been informed by both federal and state horticultural departments that southern Indiana is the logical orchard section of the middle west, Robert Dyer, of Louisville, and G. S. Green, of Boston, who are contemplating the formation of a partnership for the cultivation of a large orchard, were in this city Wednesday making inquiry about the price of land, road conditions and shipping facilities. Green formerly lived in Louisville. They were told that the variety of apples at Kingston Orchard, east of the city, was among the best in southern Indiana and spent part of the day there. They came at this time to see the trees in bloom. They were impressed with the character of the country, but said they were surprised at the condition of some of the county highways. They are both experienced orchardists and have inspected all parts of the United States with the expectation of making a choice. They said they probably would buy land in this vicinity and are to return in a few days. They complimented the manner in which the Kingston Orchard is maintained and said that the manager, James Jackson, "was certainly on the job."

IT'S BLOSSOM TIME AT THE KINGSTON ORCHARD

Apple Trees Are in Full Bloom and Many Seymour People are Visiting the Orchard.

Many persons who desire to visit Kingston Orchard east of the city, when the trees are in full bloom have made inquiry as to the time they should drive to the farm. J. J. Peter, owner of the orchard, said this afternoon that the Grimes Golden, Winesaps and Maiden Blush trees are now in bloom and that the seventeen-acre block of Bens would be in full bloom Friday and Saturday. Visitors are welcome at the orchard, he said, but they are requested not to molest the blossoms or the trees. Last year scores of Seymour people visited the orchard when it was in full bloom. Many Seymour people have already visited the orchard this year.

SWORD OF SPIRIT PROTECTS CHURCH

Able Lecture Delivered by The Rev. C. A. Franke, of Evansville, at Lutheran Conference.

LAST SESSION HELD TODAY

Prof. Theo. Koch, of Columbus, Presents Paper at Closing Session This Afternoon.

The Evangelical Lutheran Conference of southern Indiana and Ohio which convened at Emmanuel Lutheran church, E. H. Eggers, pastor, Wednesday afternoon, listened with splendid attention to a very able lecture by the Rev. C. A. Franke, D. D., of Evansville, on "The Smalcald League," an alliance of Lutheran princes and rulers for the defense of their faith. The speaker pointed principally to the lesson taught in view of the failure of the alliance due to a lack of organization. The church, as history teaches us, is never successfully preserved by the sword of the world, the power of government, but always by the sword of the spirit, the word of God, the speaker said. Alone the separation of church and state promises success to both, a union only produces discord and abortive results of no value to either, he said.

Pastor H. Diemers, of Dudleytown, read a paper on the various herods mentioned in the gospels and the acts.

At the session held in the afternoon by the Lutheran teachers, preparations were made to send delegates from this section to the national convention of Lutheran educators to be held at Chicago the last week of July. The Seymour Emmanuel church will be represented by Prof. Albert Wilde. Prominent features of last night's program, which were thoroughly enjoyed by all the conference, were an illustrated lecture on the Yosemite Valley by Prof. Geo. Potzger, of Indianapolis, a vocal trio rendered by young ladies of Emmanuel Lutheran church, Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata played by Prof. Rechlin of Indianapolis, and a vocal solo, "Twenty-third Psalm" sung by the Rev. W. C. Wagerin, of Lexington, Ky.

At the services held during the conference the Rev. Theo. Moellering spoke at the communion service on 1 Cor. 11:23-32. The Rev. H. Polack of Evansville, spoke on "Faith in the Resurrected Christ" from Luke 24:36-47 at the regular vesper service. A children's chorus of fifty voices sang "I know that My Redeemer Liveth." A conference chorus composed of pastors and teachers, Prof. E. Rechlin, leader, rendered the Psalm 133. Prof. Theodore Koch, of Columbus, presided at the organ.

Resolutions, thanking the ladies of the church for serving a very sumptous luncheon and dinner during the

GERMANY EXPECTS TO AVOID BREAK

Important Conference with Continuance of Friendly Relations with U. S. in Balance Held.

MORE INFORMATION AWAITED

Well Informed Berlin Newspapers Believe that Diplomatic Breach Can be Avoided.

By United Press.

Berlin, April 27.—A momentus conference with the continuance of friendly relations between the United States and Germany in the balance, was in progress today at the grand army headquarters.

The kaiser received the news of Chancellor Hollweg, General Falkenhyn, chief of the general staff of the army, and Admiral Von Holtzendorff, chief of the admiralty staff. He lacked only further word from Washington expected through Ambassador Gerard, before many hours defining more accurately the American submarine demands.

It is the general understanding here that Germany will not meet fully President Wilson's demands in the reply to be forwarded to Washington next week. How far Germany will go no one pretends to know, but well informed Berlin newspapers believe that Germany's concessions will suffice to prevent a diplomatic break.

The Tageblatt declared today that Ambassador Gerard is convinced as a result of his conferences with the chancellor that Germany is honestly striving to avoid a conflict and he has so reported to Washington.

The crisis of the situation has virtually passed. There will be no rupture of diplomatic relations resulting from developments to date. The United Press is able to make this statement today on most excellent authority.

Pending negotiations for a more complete understanding German submarine commanders will be under explicit instructions which will prevent repetition of acts complained of while the negotiations are under way.

The high point of danger was reached and passed two days ago when the foreign office was informed of the attitude of President Wilson. The tense attitude of a few days ago had changed to one of eager expectancy as to just what form the settlement will take. The formal reply to Washington will be delayed several days pending dispatches from Ambassador Bernstorff.

Ambassador Gerard will leave for grand army headquarters tonight for a conference with the kaiser. Chancellor Bethmann Hollweg who is now with the kaiser, is expected to return to Berlin tomorrow to prepare the reply to the American note.

MARTIAL LAW PROCLAIMED IN ALL PARTS OF IRELAND

Premier Asquith Startles Parliament With Announcement That Revolution is Spreading.

By United Press.

London, April 27—Martial law was proclaimed today throughout Ireland when reports reached the government that the rebellion is spreading.

Premier Asquith startled parliament this afternoon with the admission that prosperous western counties aer showing signs of disaffection and that street fighting is still reported. Rebels are still holding several public buildings. Parliament expected to hear that the rebellion was completed crushed and the statement that the siuation was "still serious" came as a thunderbolt.

Indianapolis, April 27.—Although the Democratic convention lost no time in buckling down to the work before them and put through their program with expedition and energy, the session, which convened promptly at 9 o'clock at Tomlinson hall, was one continuous, enthusiastic demonstration of manifested spirit and zeal and optimistic faith in carrying their party banner to victory at the polls in the November election.

The convention was called to order by State Chairman Bernard Korbly. The opening prayer was then offered by the Rev. Owen D. Odell, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of this city. Chairman Korbly then introduced Governor Samuel M. Ralston as temporary chairman. As the governor stepped forward to deliver the keynote speech, he was received with a tremendous ovation of cheers, applause and the waving of flags.

Lincoln Dixon, permanent chairman, took the gavel and the real work of the convention began.

Nominations of unopposed candidates, which included the majority of the ticket, adoption of the resolutions committee report, the address of Governor Ralston and speeches of acceptance of John A. M. Adair, nominee for governor, Senator Kern and others passed rapidly.

Senator Thomas Taggart's nomination was presented by Mayor Bell of Indianapolis midst a din of cheers and shouts and flag waving. He was nominated by acclamation. As Senator Taggart was escorted to the platform for a speech another demonstration followed, the band playing "On the Banks of the Wabash."

The first contest came with the nomination for lieutenant governor, which was won by Mason J. Niblack on the fifth ballot. The name of Leonard B. Clore, Franklin, was injected in the contest on the third ballot. Other candidates were John C. Branaman, Brownstown, Will Yarling, Shelbyville, and Fred Van Nuys, Indianapolis.

John C. McNutt of Martinsville was nominated for judge of the appellate court, First district, on the first ballot. His opponent was Edwin C. Corr of Bloomington. The vote was, John C. McNutt, 697½; Edward C. 665½.

Samuel C. Scott of New Albany was nominated state superintendent of public instruction on the first ballot by a vote of 901½, against 461½ for Daniel G. McIntosh of Worthington.

Sig W. Kann of Angola was nominated for chief of state bureau of statistics upon the third ballot. His opponents were Thomas W. Bradley, George D. Franklin, George L. Beers, James P. Hemphill and William Black. Bradley withdrew after the second ballot.

The party platform, drafted by the resolutfons committee, indorsed Democratic tariff legislation, the reserve bank act, the income tax and other national legislation of the present administration, paid a tribute to the late Senator Benjamin F. Shively and commended President Wilson. It recited acts of constructive state legislation, favored better highways and more equitable taxation.

The hall was filled, all seats being occupied except in the upper gallery, where the brass band was situated. Many persons stood in the aisles and around the edges of the hall, unable to find seats. Several hundred were seated on the stage. Many women were in the crowd, especially in the balcony and on the stage.

REVOLT IN IRELAND PLANNED IN U. S.

Papers In Von Papen's Office Reveals Plot.

New York, April 27.—Papers which show that prominent Irishmen and Germans in the United States exhibited a keen interest in plans for a revolt in Ireland were found by federal agents in their raid on the former offices here of Captain Franz von Papen, withdrawn German military attache, according ~~to~~ a statement made by a high government official. Whether the government will undertake an investigation rests with the department of justice at Washington, which has the question under advisement, it was said.

Some of the letters and other documents, it was asserted, bear the signatures of men who have been leaders in the home rule propaganda in this country.

United States Attorney Marshall refused to comment upon the status of the controversy over the arrest of Wolfe von Igel, former secretary to Von Papen.

He doubted, however, if Attorney John B. Stanchfield would carry out his announced intention of having Von Igel identify from among the papers seized in Von Papen's office those which have been characterized as "official" by the German ambassador.

It was learned from a responsible source that the federal grand jury investigating the Welland canal plot will return before the end of the week superseding indictments based upon information obtained in Von Igel's office. The new indictments, it is understood, will strengthen the government's case.

SERIOUSLY INJURED BY AUTO

C. C. Hall, of Alexandria, Ind., Struck by Machine.

Alexandria, Ind., April 27.—C. C. Hall, age fifty-eight, who owns the controlling stock in the Banner Rock Product company, was seriously injured here when an automobile driven by a Chesterfield man struck him.

The injured man was riding a bicycle on his way to the factory. Witnesses of the accident obtained the license number of the machine, and prosecution will follow, it is said.

Employes of the Lippincott Glass company, who witnessed the accident, threatened the driver, declaring he acted in an unconcerned manner and made no effort to help the injured man.

SECRECY HIDES GERMAN CRISIS

Reports From Berlin Make Situation Gloomy.

DELAY MEETING THE ISSUE

Germany, It Is Stated, Feels That It Cannot Submit to President Wilson's Demands Without Reservation

Washington, April 27.—The veil of secrecy shrouding the submarine crisis has at last sufficiently lifted to permit a general idea of the present status of the situation.

Germany, it is authoritatively learned, feels it cannot submit without reservation to President Wilson's demands and is therefore delaying its answer to the American note, while seeking a middle ground of compromise.

Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, believes a satisfactory compromise can be reached. Secretary of State Lansing apparently does not share the ambassador's optimism.

The position which Germany now takes aims at deferring a categorical reply to the president's demand that the imperial government "immediately declare and effect an abandon of present methods of submarine warfare" until the two governments, by means of exchanges of views, can come to an understanding as to whether the reply which Germany submits would be acceptable to the United States.

Count von Bernstorff is understood to have cabled suggestions to Berlin which he believes might aid in reaching this agreement. Ambassador Gerard at Berlin has reported to Secretary Lansing on a conference he had with Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg. The impression which this report made on the state department was apparently not altogether satisfactory. It was authoritatively stated that it had not changed the situation in the slightes degree.

There is no indication that the president or Secretary Lansing are regarding the crisis as less serious than it was the day the American note was dispatched to Berlin. Plain intimations were given out at the state department that over-confidence in a satisfactory adjustment was not justified. Optimistic press reports, stating that Ambassador Gerard had reassured the state department, were emphatically denied by Secretary Lansing.

President Wilson conferred with Senator Stone, chairman of the foreign relations committee of the senate. What transpired at the conference was not divulged, but the president now understands there may be considerable further delay before Germany is ready to meet the issue.

Count von Bernstorff said that he considered it very doubtful if a reply from Germany could come this week or early next week. Ambassador Gerard is understood to have been informed to the same effect by the German chancellor.

MRS. IDA ROGERS ACQUITTED

Not Guilty on Grounds of Insanity, Declares Jury.

New York, April 27.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Ida Sniffen Rogers, charged with the murder of her two children, brought in a verdict of not guilty, on the grounds of insanity. The jury agreed in one hour and thirty-five minutes, that Mrs. Rogers was temporarily crazed when she gave the baby boy and his baby sister bichloride of mercury.

Lorlys Rogers, the man who was married to another woman, although admittedly the father of Mrs. Rogers' children at the time of the tragedy, rushed across the courtroom and clasped Mrs. Rogers in his arms just as she collapsed at the reading of the verdict. Rogers married Mrs. Sniffen after obtaining a divorce from his first wife.

BATTLE WITH VILLISTAS

Colonel Dodd Routs Bandits In Running Fight; Kills Six.

General Pershing's Headquarters, near Namiquipa, Mex. (by wireless to Columbus, N. M.), April 27.—Six Villistas were killed and nineteen wounded in a three-hour running fight between a small detachment of United States cavalrymen under Colonel Dodd and about 260 Villistas under four chiefs, near Tomachio, Chihuahua. Colonel Dodd's report, received at General Pershing's headquarters, said that two American troopers were killed and three wounded.

Saddler Ralph A. Raw and Private Oliver Bomshee were killed the report stated. Wounded are Quartermaster Sergeant Lubus Drink and Privates Thomas Henry and Tillman Mathis.

Hetty Green's Serious Illness Denied.

New York, April 27.—Denial was made of the report that Mrs. Hetty Green had suffered a paralytic stroke and was dangerously ill at 5 West Ninetieth street, the home of her son, Colonel Edward H. R. Green. It was said that she had been ill, however.

Congress Is Busy.

Washington, April 27.—The senate resumed consideration of rural credits bill. The committee on agriculture continued hearings into the sisal situation. The house continued debate on bill proposing revision of federal printing laws. Republican members of naval committee held a meeting to discuss plan of action toward big battleship program. A resolution was offered by Representative Liebel of Pennsylvania, protesting against impressmen of Americans in Italian army.

MINERS' STRIKE MAY CLOSE UP ALL PLANTS

Cause Fuel Shortage In Pittsburg District.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 27.—With approximately thirty thousand employes on a strike, every Westinghouse plant located in the Turtle Creek valley has been closed down for an indefinite period.

Strikes inaugurated at the Wilmerding and Swissvale plants had a direct bearing on the issuing of the order to close down all plants.

Clashes between the strikers and the guards were frequent in the strike zone. In many instances guards were attacked, but no serious injuries resulted.

The list of persons now on strike throughout the Pittsburg district approximates 75,000.

There was a slight ray of hope that the miners' committee would reach an agreement with the officials of the Pittsburg Coal company within a few days. Failure to do so means a nearly complete shutdown of the industries in this district within the next five weeks because of a shortage of fuel.

Joseph Anderson, Detroit, representative of the International Machinists union, who arrived in the strike zone, announced that everything is in readiness for the machinists throughout the United States to make a demand on May 1 for an eight-hour day.

Get Invitation From Michigan City For Summer Outing.

Indianapolis, April 27.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic Editorial association, held at the Indiana Democratic club, an invitation from John B. Faulknor of Michigan City, was extended to the association to hold its annual midsummer outing at Michigan City. It was accepted.

The outing will be held some time in the latter part of July. The editors will start from Indianapolis on a Thursday, remaining in Michigan City the remainder of the week and returning to Indianapolis and other points some time the following Sunday.

The exact date for the outing is to be selected byMr. Faulknor and Henry Schricker, president of the association. The program for the outing also is in the hands of these men.

BERLIN HEARS OF WARNING

U. S. Attitude on Armed Merchantmen Seems to Please Germans.

Berlin, April 27.—The news that the American state department has warned American citizens not to travel on merchant ships which are under orders to pursue and attack submarines, was learned through private advices. While there was no indication that the foreign office had been officially informed of the American government's action, there is every reason to believe that it was the receipt of this important news that prompted the imperial chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, and the chief of the naval staff, Admiral von Holtzendorff, to leave hurriedly for army headquarters to hold another conference with the emperor.

Government officials declined to comment on the American government's action, when apprised of it by newspaper correspondents. Leading Berlin bankers and business men are greatly elated over the news.

Say Germans Set Fire.

Paris, April 27.—A report that two Germans had been arrested on the charge of setting fire to the naval arsenal at Lisbon is confirmed by newspapers of that city, says a Havas dispatch from the Portuguese capital.

ZEPPELINS RAID ENGLISH COAST

Third Attack Within Three Days By Germans.

INFANTRY DRIVE STOPPED

Teutons Attempt Attack Against the French In Senones Sector, In Lorraine — French Aeroplanes Drop Bombs In General Region of Verdun.

London, April 27.—Zeppelins made their third raid during the night on the English coast within three days. German airships are reported to have appeared over Kent, but on account of a mist blanketing the east coast it is believed that they withdrew without dropping many bombs.

The war office issued the following official statement concerning the raid:

"Zeppelins were reported to have appeared over the east coast of Kent. No reports of their penetration far inland have been received. Because of a mist in East Kent it is probable that they retreated. It is reported that one bomb dropped by the Zeppelins fell into the sea."

The only infantry attack attempted by the Germans was in the Senones sector, in Lorraine. This attempt was stopped by the French fire-curtain.

Heavy artillery bombardments over much of the front and unusual activity on the part of French aviators were the distinguishing features of the day. French batteries bombarded German position in the Dormoise valley, in Champagne, and in the sectors of Hill 335, Vaquois and the Boise Cheppy, in the Argonne. The artillery on both sides was active about Avocourt, Hill 304, and Montzeville, on the western bank of the Meuse in the Verdun sector, and to a lesser degree on the eastern bank of the river. Varangeville and Luneville, southeast of Nancy, were bombarded by a German long range gun.

Bombarding squadrons of French aeroplanes dropped bombs on railway stations, steel works and other points of military advantage in the general region of Verdun, at Joef steel works and at Momecourt, southeast of Briey and the railway stations at Brieulles, Conflans, Pierrepont and Mezieres being included among the points bombarded. At the same time another squadron was bombarding German munition depots in the region of Roye.

A German dirigible dropped a dozen bombs.

The Germans attempted a surprise attack north of Embermenil, in Lorraine, without success. Several German reconnaissances attempted in the Verdun region, in the sectors of Paissy and Troyon, were dispersed by the French artillery.

GERMAN WASPS IN IRISH SEA

Seek to Sink British Troop Transports Destined For Ireland.

Amsterdam, April 27.—The entire Irish sea and the Atlantic waters to the west and south of Ireland, are swarming with German submarines, whose sole task is to sink every troop transport destined for Ireland to quell the rebellion.

It became known here that the visit which Sir Roger Casement paid to the Irish coast on the night of April 21, and which resulted in his arrest by the British and the sinking of the German auxiliary with which he had come, was not the first the famous Irish nobleman paid to his native shore since he has been in Germany.

Sir Roger is said to have succeeded in landing several times large amounts of arms and ammunition and explosives, which were hurriedly taken into the interior by Separist agents who were "on the job" when the German vessel arrived.

SAVES CHILD FROM TRAIN

Crossing Watchman Flags Express In Time to Prevent Accident.

Vicksburg, Mich., April 27.—With her foot tightly caught in a switch on the tracks of the G. R. and I railway, little Miss Dale Stratton was saved from a frightful accident by the timely discovery of her plight by Andrew Johnson, the crossing tender.

A passenger train was rapidly approaching. Running down the track Johnson flagged the train and it stopped within a few feet of where the girl was held a prisoner on the track. It was several minutes before her foot could be released.

Wife Gets Sentence Suspended.

Evansville, Ind., April 27.—Frank Schaefer, formerly a merchant here, who was arrested recently in St. Louis for deserting his wife about two years ago, was sentenced to the state prison by Judge Duncan C. Givens, of the circuit court, for a term of from one to three years. The judge suspended the sentence upon plea of Schaefer's wife.

Escapes From Reformatory.

Jeffersonville, Ind., April 27.—Archie Abshire, sent to the Indiana reformatory from Vanderburg county, June 3, 1915, slipped away when at work with several other prisoners at the brick yard outside the wall. His disappearance was soon noticed and officers are hunting for him.

PASSENGER CAR OF WOOD SOON TO PASS OUT OF USE

More Than 14,000 Steel Cars Now in Use in United States—Few of Old Type Built.

Of 1,094 passenger train cars under construction for the railroads of the United States on Jan. 1, 1916, 1,075, or 98.3 per cent, were all-steel; sixteen, or 1.5 per cent, were of steel underframe construction, and only three, or 0.2 per cent, were of wood, according to a compilation just made by the special committee on relations of railway operation to legislation, showing the progress being made in the replacement of wooden cars with steel, and published in this week's issue of the Railway Age Gazette.

Of the passenger train cars acquired in 1915, 1,250, or 73.7 per cent, were all-steel; 340, or 20.1 per cent, were steel underframe, and only 906, or 6.2 per cent, were wood, while of the 61,728 passenger train cars in service on Dec. 21, 1915, 14,286 were all-steel, 6,060 were steel underframe and 41,382 were wood.

The rapidity with which wooden cars are being replaced by steel is indicated by a table in the committee's bulletin showing that of the cars acquired in each of the last seven years the proportion of all-steel cars has increased from 26 per cent in 1909 to 73.7 per cent in 1915, while the percentage of wooden cars acquired has decreased from 51.4 in 1909 to 6.2 in 1915.

The number of wooden cars in service on Jan. 1 was 41,382, indicating the retirement from service of 6,744 wooden cars in three years. To replace the 51,382 wooden cars with steel the committee estimates would cost $528,787,100, which would involve an annual interest charge, at 5 per cent, of $26,439,355.

The number of all-steel cars in service has increased from 629 in 1909 to 14,286 on Jan. 1, an increase of 2,171 per cent.

MORE DESTRUCTIVE THAN ANY WAR

Preventable Disease Kills Tens of Thousands Where War Kills One.

At a recent meeting of a mother's club the head of the health committee made some startling statements in comparing the death rate from causes due to preventable disease to the mortality in the great European war.

She showed that the great majority of human ailments are due either to unwise eating or to incomplete elimination of wastes, and urged that mothers should watch their children and see to it that they did not violate the laws of health.

She called special attention to the value of castor oil as nature's remedy for constipation. The healing properties of castor oil are universally recognized and it doesn't form a habit.

The distasteful features of castor oil have all been eliminated from CASTOR-JELL, which is 94 per cent castor oil with a delicious orange flavor added, and there is no trouble in getting either children or adults to take it. PROGRAM ARRANGED FOR SECOND CHURCH CONFERENCE

Invitations Sent to Every Church in State Urging Pastors and Laymen to Attend.

Programs for the Second Annual Church Conference to be held at Purdue University May 8, 9 and 10, are now being distributetd. Invitations are being sent to every church in the state, inviting pastors, laymen and others interested in this great rural movement to attend the conference and aid in the formulating of plans for the greater development of the rural church, which stands as one of the most important factors in rural community life. The program this year is unusually strong, having many workers of national reputation. Among those from outside the state are Dr. E. L. Earp Drew Theological Seminary, who is a noted teacher, author and lecturer. Dr. Earp has made an extensive study of rural sociology and will be able to give much help to Indiana people. Rev. C. O. Gill, of Columbus, Ohio, who has conducted extensive church surveys and directed the recent rural church conference at Columbus, which was attended by President Wilson, will have a prominent place on the program. "Centering the Community Interests in the Church" will be discussed by the Rev. W. W. Diehl, Hinckley, Illinois.

A special feature of the conference will be an opportunity for the study of the Agricultural problems. Lectures on Agriculture, together with a tour of the University, will bring to all who attend, information which can be used in the work in the state. Exhibits of materials which can be used in connection with their various organizations, together with outlines of surveys, etc., will be placed before the people at the time of the Conference.

Every one interested in making the rural church a larger and more important factor in rural development are urged to attend the conference.

C. W. Gossman of Vallonia, who was a delegate to the Democratic convention in Indianapolis, returned to his home today.

DOES NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING PAY?

A large paint manufacturer asked this question of retailers throughout thecountry:

NO. 9 SAID:

"I think newspaper publicity a necessity to get the best possible results from an advertising campaign.

"It not only brings customers to the store, but when we solicit business it is much easier to sell a paint that has been advertised locally than one people have never heard of. I think it is money well spent."

RATS AND MICE EXPENSIVE AND UNDESIRABLE PESTS

Local Physician Tells of Necessity of Conducting a Campaign of Extermination.

Rats and mice are very expensive and undesirable pests. It is claimed that a single family of rats will eat and destroy more than the keep of a horse. Then, too, they do not remain a single family very long. They are wonderfully prolific.

The discovery that the rat was the disease carrier and responsible for the spread of the Bubonic Plague was made less than a quarter of a century ago.

The rat is a great traveler. He will go miles in a few hours and often scores of miles in a few days, thus scattering infection. He will stow away in a ship at one port and escape to land at some other port, probably thousands of miles distant.

In this way a case of the plague anywhere is a possible source of infection everywhere. It is only by a systematic and constant campaign of rat extermination, rat examination for plague infection and the destruction of their breeding places by "rat-proofing" buildings and wharfs etc., that we are spared the ravages of this dread disease today.

All civilized governments of the world are working together in this. The United States government has direct control and supervision of this work in this country. The report of a single case of plague, or the discovery of a plague infected rat is sufficient to bring all the resources of our government to work for its eradication and control.

Weekly reports are received and sent out covering the infected districts, number of cases, number of rats killed, and examined, number of infected rats found and efforts used in plague prevention for every part of the world.

What is the result of all this painstaking care and large expenditure of money?

Prior to all this the plague practically depopulated whole cities and districts and at times threatened to depopulate the earth, people dying by the thousands and hundred thousands.

Now the disease is under control. There are a few cases scattered about in different parts of the world but it is rapidly disappearing and is no longer a menace to the race.

Sanitation pays.

CITIZENSHIP SUNDAY IS PROPOSED BY LABOR BUREAU

Local Ministers Receive Communications Explaining Purpose of the Day.

A number of local ministers have received a letter from the Labor Bureau in Washington, proposing that Citizenship Sunday be observed throughout the Uniter States on July 2.

The letter is self-explanatory and in part reads:

This Bureau desires to invite your attention to its efforts to have Sunday, July 2, next, set aside as Citizenship Sunday, and to request that you lend your assistance and endeavors toward the furtherance of the project by giving all publicity possible to the movement. In order that you may have data from which to prepare an article for publication, the Bureau is furnishing you below a brief resume of the work in which it has been actively engaged since August, 1915.

The first appeal ever made by the Federal Government to the public schools to enlist their cooperation for the purpose of instilling American ideals and patriotism in the minds of our foreign residents, took the form of a circular letter about August 1, 1915, from the Bureau to Superintendents of Schools in cities and towns having a population of 4,000 and over. As the result of this appeal approximately fifty of the leading cities and towns of the country immediately responded and affiliated with the Bureau of Naturalization, and night classes were established in the public schools in these cities for the instruction of the candidate for citizenship and other members of the foreign body. Since that time this work has constantly expanded and increased in volume.

In order that a uniform method of instruction might be adopted in these night classes for foreigners, the Bureau of Naturalization has prepared and distributed to the public school teachers throughout the country, "An Outline Course in Citizenship." This Course is based upon a two-year period, and corresponds to the two years which, by law, must elapse between the date on which a candidate for citizenship declares his intention to become a citizen, and the date on which he is permitted to petition for naturalization. A thorough grounding in reading, speaking, and writing in our tongue is outlined for the first year, and, for the second year, instruction in the institutions of our Government, and in the rights, duties, and responsibilities of citizenship. This Course is being used not only in the public night schools, but, in many places it has been adopted by the upper graded and public high schools, for the native-born children who are coming into citizenship responsibilities by virtue of attaining their majority.

Teachers of classes of foreigners are constantly approached by the students for information relative to naturalization procedure. In order that they may be able to respond intelligently the Bureau has prepared and distributed a Syllabus of the Naturalization Law, and has provided the teachers with the preliminary naturalization forms, and instructions as to their use. By the use of the Syllabus and the preliminary forms the teachers are enabled to assist the foreign born students in making application for citizenship, and thus prevent the students becoming the prey of unscrupulous persons—sometimes their fellow countrymen—who charge them exorbitant fees for this nominal service.

It has been the practice throughout the country to discontinue night classes about the end of March, although the public day schools continue until some time in June. The reason for this discrimination has not been apparent to the Bureau, and a movement is now in progress to have the night schools continued at least until the end of the regular day school term, and throughout the entire year if possible. The annual period prevails in at least two of the cities of the country and other schools have extended their night school term, in accordance with the desire of the Bureau. Other cities which have not as yet fallen into line are being approached, and the Bureau has enlisted city officials, newspapers, organizations, and many others in an endeavor to accomplish this needed desideratum.

Realizing that the churches could aid materially in forwarding the good citizenship movement, the Bureau of Naturalization has approached, in a most earnest manner, the churches of all denominations all over the country, in an endeavor to have at least one Sunday in each year set aside as Citizenship Sunday, on which will be preached at the morning service, in every church in the country, a sermon on Citizenship. The response to this feature of the Bureau's activities has reached its highest expectations. On every hand the highest praise has been given these efforts. Many pastors, while stating that their churches were slow to adopt "Special Sundays," have assured the Bureau that favorable consideration would be given to Citizenship Sunday. Sunday, July 2, of this year, has been selected as Citizenship Sunday, because it is the Sunday nearest Independence Day, which means so much to American citizens.

MOVIE ACTORS COMING TO POSE FOR HISTORICAL FILM

Selig Outfit to Stage Indian Scenes at Vallonia, Pigeon Roost and Other Points Nearby.

Seymour is to be invaded on May 8th or 9th by a company of moving picture actors and actresses who are to be filmed while portraying scenes of Indiana's early history in this section of the state. The company is made up of actors from the Selig studios, Chicago, and has been engaged by the Indiana Historical Commission to produce the scenes of the pioneer days of Hoosierdom. The moving picture outfit will be accompanied by several automobile loads of members of the Hoosier Motor Club, and by members of the state historical commission.

Pictures are to be made at Vallonia and at the Pigeon Roost Monument in Scott county. At the latter place the massacre of the settlers by the Indians will be re-enacted before the screen, on the identical ground where the massacre occurred. Several pictures will also be made at Vallonia, it is announced, portraying the early days around old Fort Vallonia.

The advent of the movie actors will doubtless cause considerable interest, and should do much to stimulate interest in the coming centennial celebration. The entire picture, when completed, will contain seven or eight reels of 1,000 feet of film each, and will be in great demand all over the state. The committee in charge of the Seymour Centennial Festival endeavor to secure the film for one or two days during the celebration here next September.

The company has been busy staging scenes of historical interest in other parts of the state; this week they are in Tippecanoe county, reproducing the battle of Tippecanoe. Work on the film has been progressing for several weeks. Governor Ralston and the members of the Indiana Historical Commission recently "performed" their part by smiling into the camera from the steps of the capitol building.

conference at the Lutheran club house, the pastor and the many friends of Seymour for their hospitality and last but not least the press of the city, were accepted with a rising vote. Conference concluded its sessions this afternoon to meet again in a joint session for pastors and teachers week after Easter 1917 at St. Paul's church, Indianapolis.

Today was largely occupied with a paper read by Prof. Theo. Koch, of Columbus. Among other things he said: "The Christian's one aim in life is to gain knowledge and to enlighten others, not to center thought on things material, but the inner, the higher, the soul life of man. Mind after all controls. Regeneration, reform, uplift, progress, happiness finds its incipiency and its growth in the soul. We must, however, not be self-centered but Christ-centered. For the christian alone, Christ, his sublime thought, his surpassing principles, his model life, is and must ever be all in all.

"The ideal of the Lutheran church, the center of its faith and life, from which radiates all its activity and which made for its wonderful expansion ever since the period of the reformation in the 16th century is and must ever also remain Jesus Christ. In the measure as this is realized in the life and work of the church, will it continue and succeed in its world embracing mission.

"At the present time and for past centuries the faith and culture of the Lutheran church has dominated the protestant world. The Lutheran church is not only confined to Germany and the United States but is found in all countries of the world. It numbers 65,000,000 communicant members, 2,000,000 of which live in our country. At the present rate of growth Lutherans ought to, within a decade, no longer occupy third but first place in the census reports of the United States among protestant bodies.

"Its Augsburg confession has proved the model confession after which other protestant bodies in the past have patterned their charters. Its hymns are sung in every church. Aside of its pulpit work from which however there has always been banished all politics and related questions and which has been confined solely to the gospel and its related topics. One reason for its rapid expansion has been its persistent work among the children and youth of the land in which it operates, its school system in Europe and United States. The church believes in training not first the matured tree but already the sapling. Revivalism must therefore remain an unknown feature of church work in Lutheran circles. It must center its effort upon the child. Thorough work must continually be its motto."

Told That There Was No Cure for

"After suffering for over twenty years with indigestion and having some of the best doctors here tell me there was no cure for me, I think it only right to tell you for the sake of other sufferers as well as your own satisfaction that a 25 cent bottle of Chamberlain's Tablets not only relieved me but cured me within two months although I am a man of 65 years," writes Jul. Grobien, Houston, Texas. Obtainable everywhere.

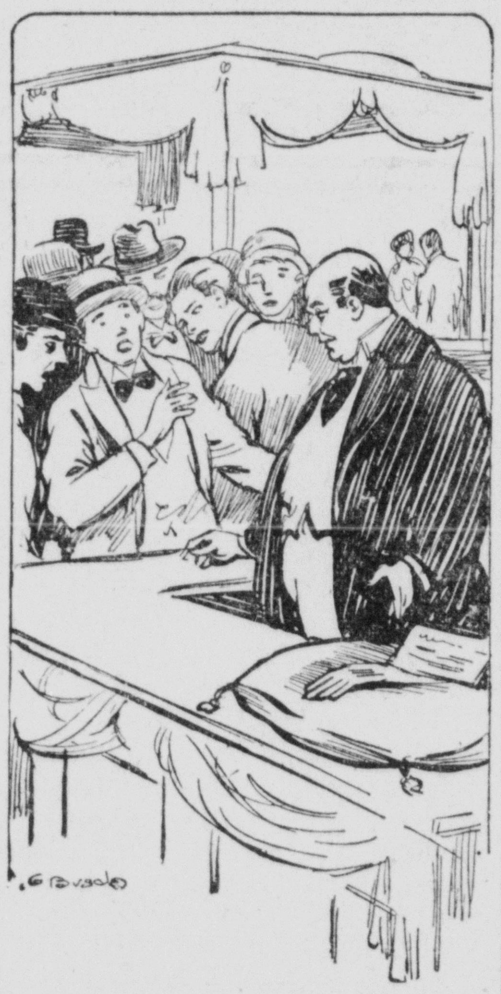
Nearly all the youth of the neighborhood attended the charity bazaar in an English town, and one by one they drifted to a stall where a tiny, shapely scented gray kid glove reposed on a satin cushion. Attached to the cushion was a notice, written in delicate feminine hand, which ran:



"NOW I AM READY FOR YOU."

"The owner of this glove will, at 7:30 this evening, be pleased to kiss any person who purchases a ticket beforehand."

Tickets were purchased by the score and at 7:30 a long row of young men assembled outside the stall.

Then, punctual to the moment, old Tom Person, the local butcher, who weighs 200 pounds and is almost as beautiful as a side of bacon, stepped to the front of the stall.

"Now, young gents," he said, "this 'ere glove belongs to me. I bought it this morning. Now I am ready for you. Come on! Don't be bashful! One at a time!"

of the firm of the Hodapp Hominy Company, was at the mill.

Parties who were attracted to the burning residence forced an opening in the house before the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Graham but the rooms were so filled with smoke that it was impossible to enter them until the windows had been left open for several minutes. Some of the furniture in the rooms on the first floor was carried out but much of it was slightly damaged by water. The floors were covered with water to the depth of several inches before the lines of hose were ordered removed.

Practically every room in the house will have to be replastered as the water came through the ceiling in streams. One line of hose was directed into the attic and soon the second floor was flooded. The seat of the fire, apparently, was in the rear of the house where several of the weather boards were burned and scorched. Fireman John Fleehearty gave his attention to extinguishing the flames there and was assisted by several volunteers. Chief Everhart was at supper when the alarm was sounded and came to the Graham home after he was notified of the fire over the telephone.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham had just completed remodeling their home and extensive repairs had been made. The last of the work was finished this week and the last load of debris was carted from the yard Wednesday about noon.

A fire was built in the furnace during the morning and shortly after noon Mr. Graham threw in a shovel of coal to keep the fire until he returned later in the day. When the firemen arrived someone entered the basement and opened the furnace door. The glow from the fire gave the appearance that the basement was aflame and an opinion was expressed that the furnace was red hot. Upon examination, however, it was found that the impression was probably gained from the reflection that came from the fire box after the furnace door was opened.

Clean Up Week Should Be Extended Into a Campaign

(By a Clean-Up Campaigner.)

"The clean-up and paint-up movement which is to crystalize into real activity during one week in May is very commendable, but what we need is more than a clean-up week. The demand, and the urgent one, is for a clean-up campaign that will extend throughout the entire year." This was the idea that was expressed by a friend of mine the other day and the more I thought of her attitude the more I was impressed with its truth. At first I paid only casual attention to her remark but when I reached home I began going over the situation from my own standpoint and am convinced that she is right.

Clean up week bobs up annually about house cleaning time. It is then that we find how much useless rubbish we have about the house. Trinkets which have been discarded by the children accumulate rapidly. The closets and chests are piled up with old clothes—just too good to throw away and not good enough to wear—so they are just carried over from season to season until finally we secretly get rid of them so that the closets can be put into order.

After the interior of the house is brushed, swept, mopped and dusted, we go outside and begin working in the lawns. The condition which we found in the house is likewise found in the yards. The ashes which have been collecting during the winter have been carelessly piled next to the alley. Maybe the bin is more than filled and the surplus has been allowed to extend over the alley line. The winds of the winter and early spring have carried small twigs from the trees and they have not been collected with any degree of care. The shed is filled with old rubbish which could have no place in the house.

So once a year after cleaning house we enter upon the campaign of getting rid of this trash and rubbish, so that there will be a place to put that which will accumulate next year. After the annual clean up campaign our yards and alleys are in a very respectable condition. The ash bin is again empty and the unsightly trash pile has been carted away. It is at this point that my friend's remark is applicable. With very little effort and labor the lawn and alley could be kept in a neat condition throughout the summer and fall and even during the winter so there would at least not be so much of the work to do in the spring. And, we could have the satisfaction of knowing that our surroundings are well kept.

If clean-up week is good in the spring of the year it is equally worthy in the fall or winter. Sanitary conditions have value throughout the year. It seems to me, therefore, that our efforts along this line should be continuous. Splendid results have been obtained each year in this city when the residents cooperate for a single purpose. If they were fully impressed with the need of keeping their lawns in an orderly and sanitary condition in winter as well as summer I am sure they would be glad to manifest the same spirit of co-operation that is seen at the present time.

Why not begin this spring and instead of conducting a clean-up week institute a clean-up "campaign?" Why not apply paint where needed in any season of the year. Fences should be protected against the snow and rain during the cold months as well as during the summer time. The committee in charge of the clean-up movement should strive, I believe, to make it a year around movement. They have done excellent work and have brought the attention of the public to the value of such cooperation. The public will be interested in making the movement permanent, just as they are willing and anxious to cooperate in conducting a successful clean-up and paint-up "week".

HATS FOR LITTLE GIRLS

Following the lead of millinery for grown-ups, hats for little girls are bright with ribbons and flowers. Braid and satin, used for making most of them, appear in the two fine examples pictured here.

CHARACTER SEEN IN FINGER NAILS

Those who have very long nails have not the same stamina and strength as have those possessed of short, broad nails. Persons with long nails are inclined to have weak chests and lungs and must be exceedingly careful that they do not contract any lung affection. If the nails are fluted and ribbed. these characteristics are even more marked.

Long nails, as a rule, denote poor circulation. Plenty of outdoor exercise is what such persons need.

Long-nailed persons are, as a rule, calmer and more peacable than short nailed individuals. They have a calmer temper and are more gentle. They are artists; they might play and paint well, and probably have talent for the stage. Such persons are rather inclined to be visionary and idealistic and must sometimes come down to earth again with a bump.

If the nails are flecked throughout with white spots it denotes that the patient's nervous system needs a thorough overhauling. Thin nails, as a rule, denote poor health and lack of energy.

If the nails are bitten, this, of course, denotes a nervous, worrying disposition. A woman with short nails and marked knots on the fingers will usually be a scold and a "nagger."

The perfect nail ought to be white and naturally polished; transparent without being too thin; slightly pink and not brittle; length to the ends of the fingers. Such are the nails of those possessing refinement, correct natural taste and tact.

If there are any black spots on the nails these denote grief, contention and melancholy while they last. They are very rarely found, however.

Housewife's Helps.

Ink Spots on Books — A solution of oxalic acid will remove them without injuring the print.

Postage stamps will stick and not turn up at the corners if the face is wet after applying them.

Dirty Coat Collars—Apply benzine and after an hour or more, when the grease has become softened, rub it or remove with soapsuds.

To Renovate Hatbands When Stained by Sweat—Dissolve one and one-half ounces white castile soap in four ounces alcohol and one ounce each of sulphuric ether and aqua-ammonia. Apply with a sponge or toothbrush, rub smartly, rinse out with clear rainwater. This is equally good to renovate any cloth with fast color.

Varying Canned Fruit.

Many now have a goodly supply of canned fruit and a great variation can be obtained by adding to the different varieties.

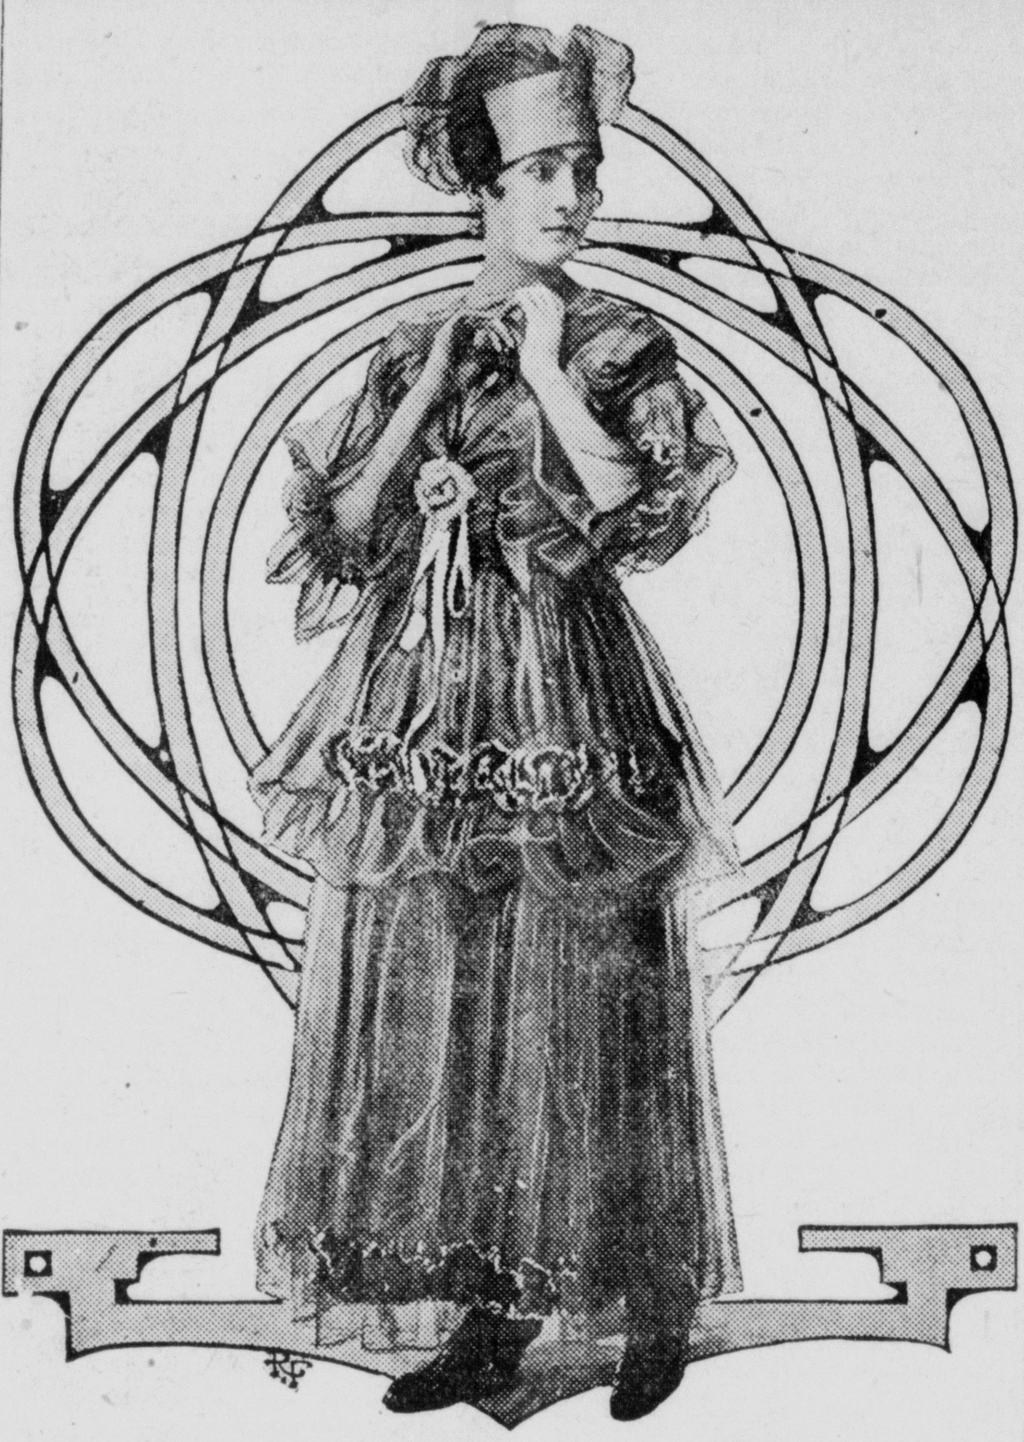
To one can of pears add one orange and half a lemon (rind included) minced very fine, a small piece of ginger root and a generous cup of sugar, cooking half an hour; a most delicious pear marmalade is is the result.

A can of peaches and a can of tomatoes blended with one cup of brown sugar, cooking until a fine tomato butter is the happy result.

A frozen tutti frutti—the blending of many different fruits with whites of three eggs added when half frozen makes a delicious ice.

Corn blended with a tart cabbage salad makes a fine relish.

Evening Dress in Black



Anything from the establishment of Jenny, in Paris, may be counted upon to interpret the mode with delightful refinement. In the productions for this season there is a leaning toward black, in this house, which is especially apparent in models for evening gowns. One of them, in which silk net and taffeta are combined in a way that will please the discriminating, is shown in the picture here. It has a full round skirt of the silk, shirred at the waist and finished with a a ruche of the silk about the bottom and about the hips. There is a bodice of the taffeta with mid-Victorian shoulders and puffed elbow sleeves, finished with a full ruche of the silk. It is draped in surplice fashion at the front.

If the designer had stopped here, there would be nothing lacking to make this an acceptable afternoon frock of a simple and attractive sort, but with nothing about it to bespeak the genius that is expressed by modes from the house of Jenny. Therefore the designer did not stop, but proceeded to veil the whole frock in a mist of net, and did this most artfully.

A flounce of the net is set on under the ruche about the hips and allowed to fall until it reaches a length more than two inches greater tha nthat of the silk skirt. It is finished at the bottom with a narrow hem. A second flounce is set in in the same position and turned up over the ruche of silk. It is gathered in at the waist and forms a deep puff below the ruching.

The silk bodice is also covered with a drapery of net that is extended over the shoulders and veils the sleeves. A deep frill of doubled net is set in under the ruch of silk about the elbows, which is included in the net veiling the sleeves.

In selecting a finishing touch the designer chose, as exactly suited to the gown, a gardenia and loops and ends of narrow ribbon in Nattier blue.

Such pretty afterthoughts of the designer often seize the attention before it is attracted by the gown itself. They nearly always betray a sense of fitness and a painstaking attention to detail that command admiration. But they have been known to betray a lack of these things in gowns otherwise above criticism.

The gown pictured was designed for a taller figure than that of the model posing in it. A silk-clad ankle and an elegant low shoe are needed to be in keeping with it.

Women Who Lead the Way

Mary Washburn—Indiana's Sculptor.

(By Mary Dille).

Indiana began to pride itself upon its sculptors as well as its writers when Miss Mary Washburn was accorded international recognition at the California expositions. Its new pride was not at all unjustifiable for the work of the Hoosier sculptor has been shown in the Paris salon and best of all has made its undeniable appeal to the masses of people.

It is a long way from the pretty little town of Rensselaer, Ind., the county seat of Jasper county, to Paris, yet it is a road that has been traveled by Miss Washburn with success along the line. Fifteen years of inexhaustible energy and indomitable will have been necessary to achieve her degree of success and fame. But the journey is now of no consequence for the friends of Miss Washburn declare that she has arrived.

The sculptor was given her first real recognition when her bronze "Consolation" was exhibited in the Paris salon. The statue epitomizes childish grief. It is a figure showing two children clasped in each other's arms. It is as a sculptor of childhood that the Indiana woman excels. Her work approaches the Greek ideal of simplicity in outline. "Philip Paul" is another distinctly modern work which again demonstrates the artist's ability in grasping the elfin personality of childhood.

Miss Washburn's rise to fame is an interesting story. As must be true of every great artist the instinct to create beauty is with her inborn. From her earliest childhood she loved to draw for the pleasure of seeing well proportioned objects. The margins of her books from her earliest school days were covered with little figures which her fingers drew almost without volition but which reflect the artistic instince of the child. She completed her common school and college course and entered the business world, but the desire for expression remained unsatisfied.

During her business life in Chicago it was necessary for her to pass the Chicago Art Institute. One night the door which had always been closed when she passed at other times, stood open. She stood without a long time watching a class in modeling. She saw beyond the strange scene, weird and untidy with its lights shining on ugly wet clay figures with heads half wrapped in cloths. The workers in untidy, muddy aprons, standing on the wet clay floor, were not ugly nor untidy to Miss Washburn. The scene was one of fairyland and she saw in it the possibility of self-expression and the fulfillment of her unsatisfied longing.

That night marked the turning point in Miss Washburn's career. She at once began a study of modeling and her progress was rapid. Eight pieces of her work were shown at the Panama Exposition. Of these four are medals and placquettes, the rest statues. Miss Washburn is proud of her Hoosier origin. Paris ad Chicago have sought to claim her, but Indiana has the prior claim.

FAVORITE RECIPES.

ORANGE MARMALADE.

This is the time when many housewives find their supply of jellies and jams getting low, or perhaps the family wants a change. Here is a delicious and economical marmalade if carefully made.

Take three oranges and three lemons. Reject the thick slice of rind at the end where there is a quantity of white. This white makes the marmalade bitter. Shred the fruit and measure it. To each measure of fruit allow three measures of water. Put the mixture into a granite kettle and let soak twenty-four hours, no less. At the end of twenty-four hours bring it to a boil. Boil hard ten minutes. Set aside for another twenty-four hours and measure again. To every measure of water and fruit allow one of sugar and an extra measure of sugar for the whole.

Thus fifteen measures of fruit require sixteen of sugar. Cook until it thickens. This will make about twenty glasses of beautiful amber colored marmalade at the small cost of about three cents per glass.

DAINTY AND LIGHT CUP CAKE.

(Can also be made into layer cake.) Break one whole egg and yolks of two more into bowl; add one cup of sugar and cream together; add one cup milk, stir thoroughly. Add one cup corn-starch with one teaspoon baking powder; beat again, then add one cup flour, pinch salt, one teaspoon baking powder; last of all, add few drops vanilla flavor if liked. Mix again thoroughly. Grease patty pans well, fill half full, put in hot oven, bake ten minutes. Frosting: Beat the two egg whites, two tablespoons cocoa mixed with little hot water and two cups confectionery sugar; beat smooth and spread.

ROQUEFORT CHEESE SALAD DRESSING.

Make a French dressing by mixing nine tablespoons oil and four tablespoons vinegar, 1½ teaspoons salt, pinch of paprika, pinch of pepper and two teaspoons sugar. To this dressing add three tablespoons chile sauce and two tablespoons thick sweet cream. Beat together thoroughly and put on ice. Before serving add one-fourth pound Roquefort cheese cut in fine pieces. Serve over hearts of lettuce.

BROWN SAUCE.

In a sauce pan brown one tablespoon of butter until dark brown, add one tablespoon of flour; stir and brown again. Add gradually one cup of beef stock or hot water and stir until smooth and thick. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Simmer five minutes.

CHICKEN POT PIE.

Two large chickens disjointed and boiled in two quarts of water. Add two slices of salt pork, season with salt and pepper. When nearly done, add crust made of one quart of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder and a salt spoon of salt, stir into a stiff batter with water and drop in the kettle while boiling, cover close and cook twenty-five minutes.

BEAN CROQUETTES.

After soaking one pint of beans over night, boil them until tender, which will require about one hour, press them through a colander, add one tablespoon of butter, a little salt, a dash or two of pepper, and one tablespoon of onion juice.

Mix thoroughly, shape with hands into croquettes, roll in egg and bread crumbs and fry in hot fat.

MUTTON HARICOTT.

Cut two pounds of breast mutton in pieces, roll in flour and brown in drippings. Transfer to a stew pan and add two sliced onions, cover with boiling water and simmer until very tender. Add one pint of parboiled potatoes and one pint of green peas, season and let simmer until vegetables are done.

OYSTER MACARONI.

Boil the macaroni in a cloth to keep it straight. Put a layer in a dish, seasoned with pepper, salt and butter, then a layer of oysters until the dish is full. Mix some grated bread with a beaten egg, spread over the top and bake.

WASH SUITS FOR SMALL BOYS

An excellent example of the practical wash suits for small boys made by manufacturers, is shown above. It is of colored chambray, with collar, cuffs, belt and pocket of white corded cotton. It does not pay to make such suits at home.

CHAPTER IX.

Acteon and Diana.

Memorial day dawned fair and warm. Bert and his wife and all their "help" went off to the village after breakfast. There were no painters in my house, and Mike had milked the cows and gone home before I arrived. Miss Goodwin and I seemed to have that little section of Bentford quite to ourselves, after the last of the carryalls had rattled past, taking the veterans from Slab City to the town. Having no flag yet of my own, I borrowed one from Bert, and we hung it from a second-story window, facing the road, as our tiny contribution to the sentiment of the day. Then we tackled the rose trellis, speedily completing it, for only two arches remained to be built, one of the carpenters having built three for me the day before, while waiting for some shingles to come for the barn. Indeed, we had it done by ten o'clock.

"Now what?" said she.

I looked about the garden. The roses had not yet come, so we couldn't very well plant them. I judged that the morning of a warm, sunny day was no time to transplant seedlings. The painting was not yet completed inside, so I could fix up no more of my rooms. The vegetable garden didn't appear to need cultivation. We couldn't paint the trellis, as there was no green paint.

"Good gracious!" I exclaimed, "this is the first time I've been at a loss for something to do. It's a terrible sensation."

"Couldn't we build a bird bath?" she suggested.

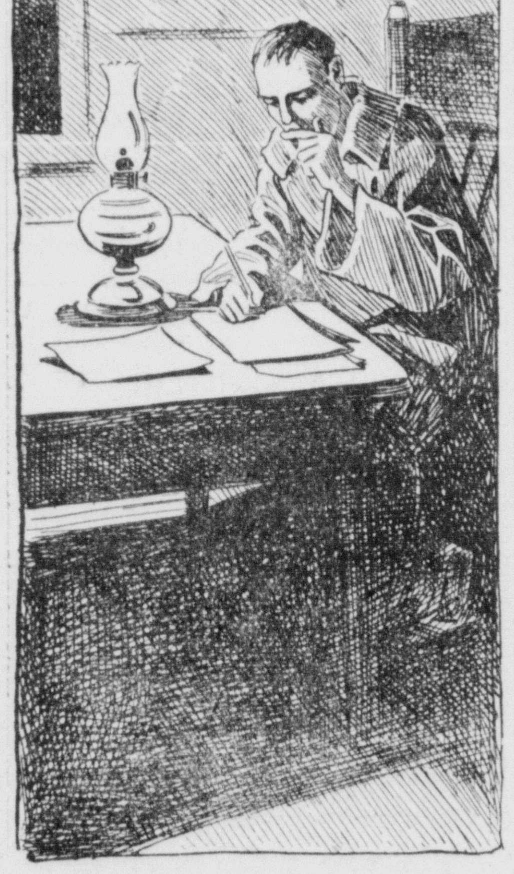
"Madam," said I, "you are a genius!"

"At the brook?" she added.

"No, not the brook. I've a better idea," said I. "My plan is to put the bird bath on the east edge of the lawn, halfway between the house and the rose aqueduct, corresponding to the sundial in the center, and to a white bench which will be placed at the west side when the grape arbor is built."

"Approved," laughed Miss Goodwin.

We measured off the spot, and I mixed a lot of cement, laid it over thick, set the bottomless box frame down upon it, and built up the four sides. As the girl had no gloves, I would not allow her to handle the cement (for nothing cracks the skin so badly, as I had discovered in my orchard work). But she kept busy mixing with the hoe, and handing me bricks. Some I broke and put in endwise, and I was careful to give all as irregular a setting as possible, till the top was reached. Then, of course, I laid an even line of the best bricks all the way around, and leveled them carefully. We had scarcely got the last brick on when we heard Bert's carryall rattle over the bridge and Bert's voice yelling "Dinner!"



Yes, I Confess It—I Wrote a Sonnet.

"Oh, dear! That cement in the box will harden!" I cried. "Dump it all in."

Then, mixing more cement I laid a square bowl, as it were, two inches deep, on the top of the little brick pile. We let it settle a few moments, and then carefully broke away the box. There stood the bird bath.

"Can we put water in it yet?" the girl asked.

"Surely," said I. "Cement will harden under water. And we'll plant climbing nasturtiums around it, too."

We passed through the house. The kitchen, dining room, and hall were finished and the paint drying. They looked very fresh and bright. The south room, as we stepped into it, was flooded with sunlight and cheerful with rugs and books. Flinging wide the glass door, we stepped out upon the terrace of the pergola-to-be, and looked toward the new bird bath. Upon its rim sat a song sparrow! Even as we watched, another came and fluttered his feet and breast daintily through the trembling little mirror of water. Then came a robin and drove them both away.

"The pig!" laughed Miss Goodwin. "Do you know, I've got a poorer opinion of robins since I came here. We city dwellers think of robins as harbingers of spring, and all that, and they epitomize the bird world. But when you really are in that world, you find they are rather large and vulgar and—and sort of upper West side-y. They aren't half so nice as the song sparrows, or the Peabodies, and, of course, compared with the thrushes—well, it's like comparing Owen Meredith with Keats, isn't it?"

"Don't be too hard on the robins," I smiled.

We looked our fill at the new bird bath, which was already functioning, as she said her boss on the dictionary would put it, and at the white sundial pillar, and at our prospective aqueduct of roses, and at the farm and the far hills beyond—and then she suddenly announced with great energy that she was going to saw wood.

"You may saw just one piece," said I, "and then you are going to take a book and rest. I'm going to work, myself. Twin Fires is getting in shape fast enough now so I can give up part of the daytime to the purely mundane task of paying the bills."

I wheeled up a big dead apple branch from the orchard to the wood shed, put it on the buck, gave her the buck-saw, and watched her first efforts, grinning.

"Go away," she laughed. "You bother me."

So I went, opened the west window by my desk to the wandering summer breeze, and went at my toil. Presently I heard her tiptoeing into the room.

"Done?" said I.

She nodded. "Now I want—let's see what I want—well, I guess 'Marius the Epicurean' and 'Alice in Wonderland' will do. I'm going to sit in the orchard. You work here till five or your salary will be docked. Good-by."

I heard her go out by the front door, and then silence settled over the sun-filled, cheerful room, while I plugged away at my tasks. I don't know how long I worked, but finally my attention began to wander. I wondered if she were still in the orchard. I looked out upon the sweet stretches of my farm, with the golden light of afternoon upon it, and work became a burden. "Shall I ever be able to work, except at night, or on rainy days!" I wondered with a smile, as I tossed the manuscript I was reading into a drawer, and went out through the front entrance.

The girl was nowhere to be seen. "She's probably in her beloved pines," I reflected. "It would be a good time to clean out a path in the pines." I turned back to get a hatchet, and then went down toward the brook.

I trod as noiselessly as I could through the maples, thinking to surprise her at her reading, and took care in the pines not to step on any dead twigs. She was nowhere to be seen near the upper end of the grove, but as I advanced I heard a splashing louder than the soft ripple of the brook, and suddenly around a thick tree at a bend in the stream, where the brook ran out toward the tamarack swamp in the corner of my farm, I came upon her. She had her shoes and stockings off, and with her skirts held high she was wading with solemn, quiet delight in a little pool. Her back was toward me. I could have discreetly retreated, and she been none the wiser. But, alas! Acteon was neither the first nor the last of his sex. The water rippled so coolly around her white ankles! The sunlight dappled down so charmingly upon her chestnut hair! And I said, with a laugh, "So that is why you wanted me to work until five o'clock!"

She turned with a little exclamation, the color flaming to her cheeks. Then she, too, laughed, as she stood in the brook, holding her skirts above the water.

"Consider yourself turned to a stag," she said.

"All right," I answered, "but don't stay in that cold water too long."

"If I do it will be your fault," she smiled, with a sidelong glance. Then she turned and began wading tentatively downstream. But the brook deepened suddenly, and she sank almost to her knees, catching her skirts up just in time. I withdrew hastily, and called back to her to come out. When I heard her on the bank, I brought her a big handkerchief for a towel, and withdrew once more, telling her to hurry and help me plan the path through the pines. In a moment or two she was by my side. We looked at each other. Her face was still flushed, but her eyes were merry. We were standing on almost the exact spot where we had first met. But now there seemed in some subtle wise a new bond of intimacy between us, a bond that had not existed before this hour. I could not analyze it, but I felt it, and I knew she felt it. But what she said was:

"I told you to work till five o'clock."

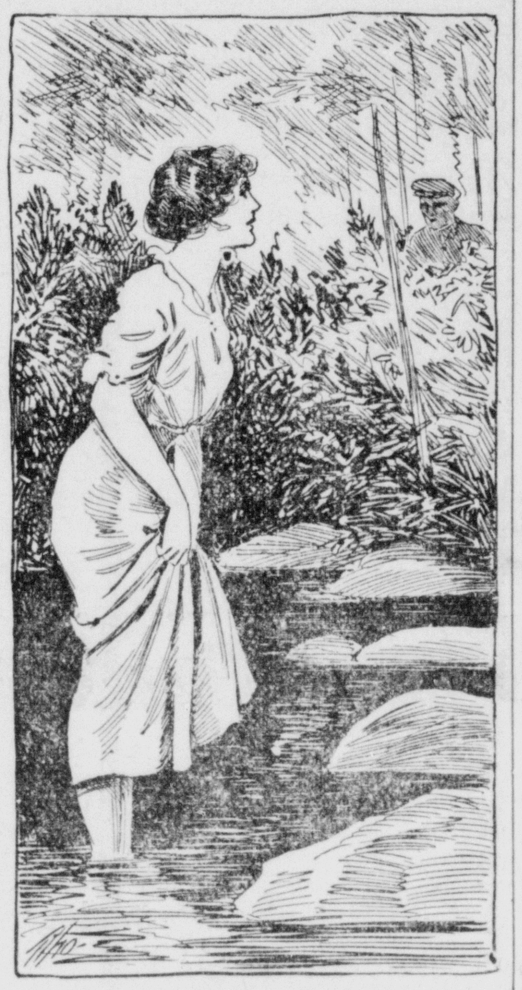
"It's half-past four," I answered. "Besides, you must have sent for me. Something suddenly prompted me to come out and hunt you up, at any rate."

"To say I sent for you is rather—rather forward, under the circumstances, don't you think?"

"It might be—and it might not be," I answered. "Did you have a good time?"

"The best I ever had—till you spoiled it," she exclaimed. "Oh, the nice, cold brook! Now, let's build the path you spoke about once."

We went back to the maples, where the ground was open, and selected a spot on the edge of the pines where the path would most naturally enter. Then we let it wind along by the brook. When we reached the hayfield wall beside the house it was nearly six o'clock.



"That's Why You Wanted Me to Work Until Five o'Clock!"

"Now, let's just walk back through it!" she cried. "Tomorrow we can bring the wheelbarrow, can't we, and pick up the litter we've made?"

"I can, at any rate, while you wade," said I.

She shot a little look up into my face. "I guess I'll help," she smiled.

In the low afternoon light we turned about and retraced our steps. There was but a fringe of pines along the southern wall, and as they were forty-year-old trees here the view both back to the house and over the wall into the next pasture was airy and open. Then the path led through a corner of the tamarack swamp where in wet weather I should have to put down some planks, and where the cattails grew breast high on either side. Then it entered the thick pine grove where a great many of the trees were evidently not more than fifteen or twenty years old and grew very close. The sunlight was shut out, save for daggers of blue between the trunks toward the west. The air seemed hushed, as if twilight were already brooding here. The little brook rippled softly.

As we came to the first crossing, I pointed to the pool, already dark with shadow, and said, "It was wrong of me to play Acteon to your Diana, but I am not ashamed nor sorry. You were very charming in the dappled light, and you were doing a natural thing, and in among these little pines, perhaps, two friends may be two friends, though they are man and woman."

She did not reply at once, but stood beside me looking at the dark pool and apparently listening to the whisper of the running water against the stepping-stones. Finally she said with a little laugh, "I have always thought that perhaps Diana was unduly severe. Come, we must be moving on."

Once more we entered the pines, following the new path over the brook again to the spot where we first had met. There I touched her hand. "Let us wait for the thrush here," I whispered.

I could see her glimmering face lifted to mine. "Why here?" she asked.

"Because it was here we first heard him."

"Oh, forgive me," she answered. "I didn't realize! The path has made it look different, I guess. Forgive me."

She spoke very low, and her voice was grieving. Did it mean so much to her? A sudden pang went through my heart—and then a sudden hot wave of joy—and then sudden doubts. I was silent. So was the thrush. Presently I touched her hand again, gently.

"Come," said I, "we have scared him with our chopping. He will come back, though, and then we will walk down the clean path, making no noise, and hear him sing."

"Nice path," she said, "to come out of your door, through your orchard, and wander up a path by a brook, through your own pines! Oh, fortunate mortal!"

"And find Diana wading in a pool," I added.

Again she shot an odd, questioning look at me, and shook her head. Then she ran into the south room and put the books back on the shelves.

"Which one did you read, Marius or Alice?" I asked.

"Neither," she smiled, as I locked the house behind us.

MARGARET MASON'S FASHION LETTER

(Written for the United Press.)

New York, April 27.—Yes, mitts are now on every hand and what ever will become of all those delicate situations that have to be handled with kid gloves goodness only knows.

If we are going into the old fashioned fashions thoroughly it is only natural that we should look to our hands as carefully as to our hips and you must needs admit that the mitted hand is as much a part of the 1830 modes as the hooped and crinolined skirt.

Black silk mitts and white silk mitts and mitts ecru, grey and pastel tinted are ready to our hands, but the really first hand mitt is of all over black lace to add perfection to the frilly old flowered organdies and muslins so reminiscent of old lavendar and Godey's Lady's Book.

Now every woman knows that nothin shows up a hand's imperfections like a mitt. If your nails are not well shaped, your knuckles red or knotty, they will be discovered and uncovered in mitts. All the little manicures are already chortling with glee at the rich summer harvest of lady fingers that will be theirs as long as the mitt is destined to wave on the hands of the brave and fair.

Jewelers are also taking notice for rings will no longer hide their light under a kidskin but will twinkle unrestrained on nude digits.

A single odd ring, original and unique of design and denoting the personality of the wearer, is most to be desired. The old fashioned cameo rings, coral rings and hair rings are being revived and the whole old fashioned sets of carved coral, cameos and jet are greatly in demand; earrings, brooch, locket, ring and bracelets in their quaint and reminiscent entirety.

Seed pearl sets also are favorites and old fashioned sets of gold, black enameled and set with pearls are exquisite.

Too many rings of course spoil the mitt, for it is an exponent of the clinging vine or ingenuous innocence mode of dress. One ring on each paddy is quite all that is permissible to her who is a stickler for good taste and the eternal fitness of things. Hence all the more need for care in its selection, individuality and design.

Art jewelers are consequently on their mettle with their metal turning out this costume jewelry.

Happy indeed is the maid who is the proud possessor of an exquisite carved red coral set, brooch, earrings, bracelets, ring and back comb all complete, that has been handed down from a great-great aunt.

An object of envy also is the lass who cherishes a black onyx ring set with a pearl as her share of great grandmothers's set that has been divided among her sisters and her cousins and her aunts.

But take heart, fair ladies who possess jewel hung family tree, the modern jewelers are no pikers when it comes to imitating antiques, so even you may hail with joy the advent of the mitt.

Yea verily, I believe everywoman will, since it leaves her fingers free to stick in every pie.

Dame Fashion Don'ts.

"Many a beautiful woman does everything she can in dress to lessen her beauty, says Grace Margaret Gould in the May Woman's Home Companion.

"She is beautiful, but she has no taste. The fact that she knows she is beautiful makes her careless. She thinks she can wear anything. The result is that she does wear everything except the right thing. She has no idea of color or becoming lines. If she has a high complexion, she will persist in wearing an evening gown of brilliant red. If she has golden hair, she will persist in wearing all shades of yellow, and a cloth of gold gown is the height of her ambition."

To Wash Comforters.

Many a woman has almost broken her back trying to wring heavy comforters. After washing them, hang them on the line and let them drain. Then, before they are quite dry, take a switch and switch them lightly. It will revive the cotton and make them much fluffier; they will seem like new and it saves hard work.

Best Way to Kill Flies.

The May Woman's Home Companion gives a way to kill flies that beats swatting 'em all hollow. Here it is:

"Take a piece of seven-eighths-inch soft wood three inches square, into which you have driven, near the corners at a slight angle, four eight-penny finish nails. Saw off the handle of an old broom and nail this block of wood to one end of it. Half fill a tumbler with cold water and put in it a tablespoonful of kerosene oil (soapsuds also may be used). Place the tumbler on the piece of wood between the nails and raise it to the ceiling, covering the fly. The fumes of the kerosene oil cause the flies to drop into the glass. The best time to do this is in the evening, at dusk, or early in the morning while the flies are settled on the ceiling."

A teaspoonful of castor oil poured on the soil at the roots of a dying palm or asparagus fern will make it grow like magic.

VEGETABLE CALOMEL

Vegetable calomel, extract of the root of the old-fashioned may-apple plant, does not salivate. As a liver stimulator, it's great. It's a perfect substitute for ordinary calomel (mercury); in fact, it's better, because its action is gentle instead of severe and irritating—and it leaves no mean, disagreeable aftereffects. Physicians recognize this and prescribe may-apple root (podophyllin, they call it) daily.

Combined with four other standard, all-vegetable remedies, may-apple root may now be had at most any druggist's in convenient sugar-coated tablet form by asking for Sentanel Laxatives. If you forget the name, ask for the box that has the picture of the soldier on it.

These tablets are small, easy to take and are really wonderful little performers.

They quickly clean out the poisons that are causing you headache, constipation, sour stomach, biliousness, dizzy spells, bad breath and coated tongue.

They are mild. They never gripe. And they are a bowel tonic as well as a cleanser and liver regulator. A 10c box should last one several weeks. A Physician's trial package (4 doses) will be mailed you free if you write mentioning this advertisement. The Sentanel Remedies Co., 802 Madison Ave., Covington, Ky.

CENTENNIAL DATE SET FOR SEPTEMBER 11-16

committee would take up at once the matter of the entertainment for the week. He promised that every effort would be made to secure only the very highest grade of attractions, and that the committee was open to suggestions from any one who had anything to offer. An effort will be made to get away, as much as possible, from the stereotyped form of attractions for events of this kind. Mr. Carter pledged the committee to distribute the attractions throughout the business district so that all sections would be equally taken care of. The free attractions—the crowd getters—will be centered at three corners: Second and Ewing, Second and Chestnut, and Chestnut and Bruce. Other attractions, Mr. Carter said, would be distributed equally throughout the festival district.

E. O. Heuser, chairman of the finance committee, called a meeting of his committee immediately following the adjournment of the general committee, and the matter of financing the event was gone into. The committee will meet again next Tuesday evening, and will have its plan of campaign ready to report at the next meeting of the general committee on Wednesday evening.

PRESBYTERIAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS AT HENRYVILLE

Seymour and Brownstown Churches Well Represented at Two Day Session Commencing Today.

The Seymour and Brownstown Presbyterian churches will be well represented at the forty-third annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the New Albany Presbytery, which convened today at Henryville for a two days' meeting. Those who went from the local church were: Mrs. T. A. Mott, Miss Kate Jackson, Mrs. Dr. J. H. Carter, Mrs. H. L. Bridges and Mrs. Oscar Carter. From the Brownstown church were Mrs. Sarah Finley, Mrs. A. Price, Mrs. Ada Schwein and daughter, Miss Edna.

Besides the delegates a large number of members of the missionary societies of the New Albany Presbyterian churches will attend.

Sessions of the convention were to be held this morning, afternoon and tonight and tomorrow morning and afternoon. Mrs. J. T. Tracy, of New York, will be one of the speakers. She will speak at the session this afternoon, having for her subject "The Indian." Dr. Howard Campbell will be the speaker at the session tonight, and Miss J. Barr will be the speaker tomorrow morning. Reports of committees will be received and other routine business will be transacted at the different sessoins.

Should Not Feel Discouraged

So many people troubled with indigestion and constipation have been benefited by taking Chamberlain's Tablets that no one should feel discouraged who has not given them a trial. They contain no pepsin or other digestive ferments but strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Obtainable everywhere.
